

The Chattahoochee Quill

Whispers from the Hills — Edition No. 17: A Visitor in the Chamber

Dearest Gentle Reader,

On August 5th, the Council Chamber welcomed a guest whose very presence tolled louder than any gavel: Fulton County Chairman Robb Pitts.

He did not arrive alone. Photos show him flanked by His Worship the Mayor, Lady Camille Lowe, and Lady Angela Addition — a tableau worth more than the staged smiles it produced.

For Pitts, no stranger to the levers of regional power, is not the sort to idle away an evening in a rural Council Chamber. His presence whispers of alignments and agendas larger than the room itself. And in a city where three-quarters of every property tax dollar flows to Fulton County or Fulton County Schools, his interest is neither casual nor charitable.

With rezoning decisions now on the books promising $100 million in projected benefit to Fulton County, one wonders: was Pitts here to applaud, to anoint, or to ensure the wheels of growth remain well-oiled?

Until the next whisper,
Your Faithful Observer in Chattahoochee Hills

Editor's Notes: Who Is Robb Pitts?

- Current Role: Chairman, Fulton County Board of Commissioners (since 2017; reelected 2020, 2024).
- Regional Power:
 - Board Member, Atlanta Regional Commission (ARC) — shaping long-range planning, transportation, and growth in metro Atlanta.
 - Board Member, Aerotropolis Atlanta Alliance — a coalition driving development around Hartsfield-Jackson Airport, linking Fulton County directly to major growth corridors.
- Past Roles:
 - President, Atlanta City Council (1997–2001)
 - Member, Atlanta City Council (1983–1997)
 - Vice Chair, Fulton County Board of Commissioners (2002–2014)
- Development Stance: A career-long pro-development politician, Pitts has consistently backed growth-oriented policies, positioning Fulton as a beneficiary of rezoning and infrastructure expansions.
- Why It Matters:
 - Property Tax Reality: Roughly $\frac{3}{4}$ of Chattahoochee Hills' property tax revenues flow to Fulton County or its schools.
 - Rezoning Windfall: With the approval of recent rezonings, Fulton County stands to gain $100 million in projected benefits — a fact that gives weight to Pitts' August 5th appearance.